Ninety-six applications for license to retail the ardent were filed yesterday, "and I feel," said Clerk Montague, "as if there had been a thousand, for I am tired all over."

The total number of applications recorded at the assessor's office up to and factualing the ninety-six, was: For retail, 560; wholesale, 103. Last year at the same data the total was 544 retail and 145 wholethe total was 544 retail and 145 whole-the total was 544 retail and 145 wholesale.

The number received for this year is greatly in excess of the office expectations. It was previously estimated that there would be 500 filed for retail and 100 for wholesale license by the time the books close this evening. The prespects now are, and the office anticipates, that there will be an aggregate of 600 retail and probably 120 wholesale applications entered for the year.
The revenues that may be expected from this source, upon the assumption that the list will not be scaled by the board of excise, are:
From retail, $240,000; wholesale, $30,000, or a total of $270,000, which exceeds by several thousands the assessor's estimates.

It is by no means certain, though, that every one will be able to show a "clean bill of health." Besides the instances cited yesterday it is known that stremous efforts will be made to reduce the number of licensed bars for the coming year for other reasons, the Anti-saloon League being foremest in the fight.

CONVENTION'S LAST SESSION

Report of the Statistical Committee Showed an Enrollment of 20,078 Scholars in 74 Schools-Addresses by Revs. McKim, Hamlin, Johnson, Easton and Others.

"In this bright day of ours the two words Sunday schools mean something. Next to the Gospel, they point to the best remedy for infldelity, and show us the antidote for all the corrupt forms of error, spiritualism, Christian science, theosophy, and multi-colored systems of skeptical teaching." Sospoke Dr. Thomas C. Easton at the closing session of the Sunday school convention last night in an address on the power of object teachings. The closing sessions of the convention were exceedingly interesting, and the attendance much larger Owing to the tardy arrival of delegates the was read by Chairman Matthews. It showed the enrollment of seventy-four local white schools to be 20,078, with 437 delegates.

The first address of the morning was on the subject of "Bible teaching adapted to primary classes," by Mrs. W. F. Crafte, one of the most successful referred. most successful primary teachers in the United States. Mrs. Craits is a thorough be-liever in blackboard fillustration and thought kindergarten methods should be frequently kindergarten methods should be frequently employed in the primary work.

Mr. Frank Hamilton, superintendent of the local primary union, told how the lesson should be impressed upon the children. In his opinion the truth should be impressed principally by repetition. Miss E. Robertson read an essay entitled "A Dream" and Col. Weston Film read the report of the statistical committee, showing that the seventy-four schools reporting to the committee have 1,536 teachers and 19,473 scholars. The session closed with the benediction by Rev. Dr. Corcoran, of Ontario, Canada.

The afternoon session was devoted to a
